

“CHOOSING WHERE TO STUDY IS ONE OF THE MOST CHALLENGING DECISIONS A MUSICIAN EVER MAKES.

You need teachers of international renown, individuals who are experienced in working with the most gifted musicians of your generation and accustomed to unlocking potential you may never have dreamed of. As a soloist or an ensemble player, you want the opportunity to perform to the highest standards. As a composer, you need to hear your music performed by accomplished musicians. You require an environment that is nurturing, challenging and rich in artistic stimulus, with practical resources that reflect and serve your own ambition.

You need to live in a city with a cultural life that is unsurpassed anywhere in the world. You deserve to study at an institution which takes your musical future seriously from the day you arrive, and works with you to ensure that you enjoy lifelong success and fulfilment from your music.

We hope that the pages that follow give you an idea of what it's like to be a student at the Royal College of Music in London. Remember, you can email your questions to the addresses displayed in each section, and do check www.rcm.ac.uk regularly for the latest information...

Professor Colin Lawson Director
MA (Oxon), MA, PhD, DMus, FRCM, FRNCM, FLCM

...GOOD LUCK WITH YOUR DECISION.”